Activity Description:

The North Carolina State University's Coastal Dynamics Design Lab (CDDL) shall complete the activities associated with community floodprint reports. The goal of the Community Floodprint is to help increase social and physical resilience within their respective focus area(s), specifically through recommending strategies that reduce flood risk, improve public safety, and enhance long-term environmental function within historically flood-prone areas. All aspects of the process aspire to co-create actionable plans used to attract resources that enable communities to forge ahead through the difficult tasks of rebuilding and preparing for future natural disasters.
